Reasons for pegging in an alternate manner to support the 'Pegging of Land' for a Miscellaneous Purpose Licence

Persuant to Mining Regulation 52(1) Rex Minerals (SA) Pty Ltd (Rex) seek to apply for a miscellaneous purpose licence (MPL) in an alternate manner to that set out in the Regulations. The following information provides reasons why approval should be given to peg the (MPL) area in an alternate manner.

The purpose of the MPL is to provide tenure for required infrastructure associated with the Hillside Project. This MPL outlines a corridor that will contain three pipelines and a high voltage powerline. The powerline is intended to be placed within an existing road corridor, and the pipelines are intended to be placed within freehold land adjacent to the road corridor. The pipe lines will facilitate the movement of mineral concentrate from the Hillside mine site to the Port of Ardrossan, the pumping of return process water from the Port back to Hillside, and potable water via a pipeline that will be part of the State's water infrastructure.

It is not considered practical to physically peg the MPL in the conventional manner for the reasons outlined as follows. The area subject to the MPL application covers approximately 11 kilometres along existing road corridors, and the boundaries are aligned along or parallel to (30m inside) existing freehold title boundaries. Due to the distance between some corners and the undulating topography, in many instances it would not be possible to site from one peg to another. Additionally, the eastern half of the MPL is pegged within cultivated land, and physical placement of pegs within this land will likely impact on the current farming activities. The proposed location of the MPL is provided in the plans accompanying the application.

The proposed MPL boundaries are aligned with, or parallel to, freehold title boundaries as far as practical. The MPL boundary has been surveyed to share a common boundary with adjacent mining tenure held by One Steel Manufacturing Pty Ltd.
