To whom it may concern,

I am writing to express my utter disgust regarding Terramin's proposed gold mine in Woodside, South Australia.

As a local resident and employee to Bird in Hand Winery, I'm completely flummoxed that this short-term, high risk project is even being considered since it has the potential to create serious long-term damage to local businesses, jobs, including my own and the environment.

My major concerns are Terramin's untried and untested technology, 24/7 operations causing disturbance to local businesses and residents and harm to tourism.

When I picture the Adelaide Hills, I think of an Internationally known region of thriving tourism, exceptional food and wine, including locally farmed produce. The Adelaide Hills attracts 1.4 million visitors every year thanks to its pristine landscape and world class wineries. As an employee at Bird in Hand Winery, I know the importance of high-quality water to sustain our business and if damage to water occurs, it will ruin our ability to produce world class wines, resulting in a dip in tourism which will not only affect us but 744 tourism-based businesses in the area.

I completely oppose Terramin's proposed gold mine, and as a local resident who has called this place home for 10 years, I will be utterly heart broken and distraught if this goes ahead. It's not worth the risk.

I hope you take my submission into consideration and think about the local residents and businesses when making your final decision. The only way to ensure that permit damage isn't caused is stopping this mine before it devastates this tight knit Woodside community.

Kind regards,

Tameka Morelli
